Mexican Railway is a lively team building activity perfect for breaking the ice or energising delegates at a conference.

Taking its name from the Mexican Wave, Mexican Railway will raise the volume and energy at any event ending in either one huge, synchronised movement or as a fast-paced competition between multiple teams.

Following a short brief, teams will receive the necessary equipment and be tasked with assembly of a section of Mexican Railway. Once each section is complete, pre-challenge practice run throughs will take place while teams test getting a ball around their entire length of railway.

Once teams are confident of a fully functioning section, they will compete to see how many balls they can get through their section within the allotted time without damaging their engineering!

Alternatively, they can work together with other teams to create one huge correctly functioning Mexican Railway successfully.
